

Mark Glazier Lobbies Congress for Better Protein Labeling Laws | #016

written by Mike Roberto | October 9, 2018

In May of 2018, Mike and Mark Glazier talked about Mark's recent trip to Washington D.C. (posted here on Mark's Facebook and embedded below), where the NutraBio founder and CEO was lobbying for better protein labeling laws.

Mark explains some of the issues he commonly sees, and while we believe that customer education is the best way to go, there are many things that could be done from the top down view that could certainly help keep the bad actors from scamming and winning lawsuits, especially in the case of protein amino acid spiking.

The conversation on the YouTube comments below are interesting, with many not wanting more regulation. Mark typically agrees, but he also knows the loopholes in the current laws, and would like to see them patched up for the industry. We discuss where those problems lie:
